 Biographical Note

Any dichotomy between ethnic dance and art dance dissolves if one regards dance ethnology, not as a description or reproduction of a particular kind of dance, but as an approach toward, and a method of, eliciting the place of dance in human life -- in a word, as a branch of anthropology. (page 250)

Gertrude Prokosch Kurath
 "Panorama of Dance Ethnology,"
Current Anthropology 1,3:233-254

"Beginning in the fifties, dance research in the Southwest received a major boost from Gertrude Kurath, who has undoubtedly been the most active researcher in Pueblo music and dance for the past twenty years [1950's-1970's]. Trained as a dancer, choreographer, musician, and art historian, as well as familiar with dance notation systems, Kurath began emphasizing the combination of musicology and dance ethnology in the mid-forties, and in the fifties, turned her own research efforts to the Southwest. This signaled the beginning of scholarly, exact, serious observation by specialists trained to use words and symbols to record dance.

"As the decade began, Kurath was busy describing choreology, its methods, and its relation to anthropology in the American Anthropologist (1950, 1956a). She also joined those interested in mapping geographic distributions of style in her attempt at establishing choreographic areas of North America (1953). In this study, which ends with a call for preservation of area patterns in recorded form before extinction, Kurath identifies seven areas on the basis of ground plans, typical steps, and body movement patterns. The "complex and all inclusive Southwest," is one such area; "it distinguishes sedentary and nomadic groups with their respective circles and straight lines, yet intermingling; and it shows increasing influence from Mexico to the southerly regions" (1953:71).

"Other papers by Kurath used southwestern data in discussing aboriginal American folk dance (1955) and masked clowns (1956b). Nineteen fifty seven was an extremely productive year; her "Basic Techniques of a Pueblo Indian Corn Dance" (1957b) included precise comments on posture, foot locomotion, arm movement, and fundamental steps, as well as dance notation scores, discussion of these notation problems, and identification of future research needs. Kurath's regard for native dances as part of viable cultural traditions is clarified by her comments on appropriate use . . . The year 1957 was also the beginning of Kurath's eight years of support from the Wenner Gren Foundation for her monumental study of Tewa Music and Dance (1970)."

Publications

In 1946 Gertrude contributed over 600 entries on folk dance and music to the Dictionary of folklore, mythology and legend, 2 volumes. Edited by Maria Leach. New York: Funk and Wagnalls.

In 1958 she succeeded the late Doris Humphrey as dance consultant for the Webster's International Dictionary.

A prolific scholar/writer, her many works spanning 1931 to 1970 were documented as "Special Bibliography" in the journal ETHNOMUSICOLOGY (Kealiinohomoku and Gillis). There is no updated compendium.

From 1970 until her death in 1992, Gertrude continued to write - books, chapters, articles and reviews. Her final written contribution, "Music and dance unite in earthward plunge and skyward flight," was published posthumously in 1994. This piece encapsulates Gertrude's lifelong commitment to the relationship of music and dance, the ecology of the dance, and her devotion to dance that she expressed often by declaring she was a dancer first and foremost.

Friends and Colleagues

Among countless numbers of friends and colleagues of Gertrude Prokosch Kurath, only a few are listed here: Juana de Laban, Eleanor King, Doris Humphrey, Curt Sachs, William Fenton, Bodil Christensen, Sol Tax, Carl Voegelin, David Kenosha, James Howard, Frank G. Speck, Marius Barbeau, Hugh Miller, Judith Becker, Joyce and William Malm, Mischa and Estelle Titiev, Antonio Garcia, Nancy Davis, Judith Vander, Nancy Lurie, Helen Tanner, Willard Rhodes, Alan P. Kealiinohomoku

Tributes

Gertrude Prokosch Kurath and Marian Van Tuyl were honored by CORD (Committee on Research in Dance) for their third conference, "New dimensions in dance research: anthropology and dance - the American Indian." (see Wimmer)

The UCLA Graduate Dance Ethnologists honored Gertrude at their annual forum in 1986.

The Society for Ethnomusicology in 1987 held a reception in her honor to express appreciation for her many years of “bringing dance into its proper place alongside music.” (Leichtman 1994, n.p.). She was presented with a plaque citing “her sensitivity to the relationship between music and dance.” It was a gala occasion enjoyed by all.

The Michigan State University Museum presented the Heritage Award to Gertrude Prokosch Kurath, posthumously, in August, 2001. That same August she was honored by the National Folk Festival in East Lansing, Michigan.

A panel honored Kurath at the 2001 annual meeting of the Society for Ethnomusicology. See CCDR Newsletter in References section.

Scope and Content

This collection includes photos of GPK as a dancer and photos of her company in Rhode Island. It includes photos taken on her various field trips to Mexico, New Mexico, Michigan. It includes 8 mm films of various field work situations and these films have been copied and preserved on beta video - two sets of each: one for viewing and the other as part of permanent storage. In the preparation of this archive, many photos were preserved and copied. Negatives are preserved in appropriate archival cases. The collection includes costume pieces she collected in Mexico, and sometimes wore in the 1940's and 1950's when she gave lecture-demonstrations under the name “Tula.” In the 1950s' she worked extensively with school children in Michigan introducing them to dances of Indians from the Michigan area. The collection includes photos of GPK with children performing out of doors.

The collection also includes personal correspondence and memorabilia as well as her professional notes, lectures, and manuscripts.

Organization

The archives are housed in archival boxes shelved at the CCDR facility. The data base lists 42 boxes, although some of the boxes include several containers that continue the box content. They are labeled A,B,C,D and so forth. The data base is on the internet at website <www.ccdr.org>. Related materials are listed on the CCDR Mac OS X (apple). Additional materials are shelved or stored at the Flagstaff branch of Cross-Cultural Dance Resources, 518 South Agassiz St., Flagstaff, AZ 86001-5711 (928) 774-8108

Dates in Boxes #6 and #37, are provided in the format: YY/MM/DD (e.g. 57/02/24 is February 24, 1957).

Related Material

1. The Kurath collections were donated in 1992 with a deed of gift to Cross-Cultural Dance Resources by Ellen Kurath, executor for her deceased mother, Gertrude Prokosch Kurath,. The collections include research from biographical memorabilia, Rhode Island, Mexico, New Mexico, Michigan, organizations, theoretical materials, manuscripts, newspaper reviews of performances held in Michigan.

This archive does not include most Iroquois and Canadian Indian materials collected and researched by GPK; Ellen Kurath, as her mother's executor donated materials pertaining to Northeast and Canadian Indians to the Woodlands Cultural Centre, 184 Mohawk Street, Box 1506, Brantford, Ontario, CANADA N3T 5V6

2. The 8 mm films of Pueblo Indian dances were made for GPK by Dr. Hugh Miller, professor of Music at the University of New Mexico in Albuquerque, New Mexico, on the 8 mm sound projector that Miller was commissioned to test for the Kodak Company in the 1960's. At present no projector has been found to play these films with sound, but the visual images have been transmitted without sound to beta video tapes as part of the grant to CCDR for the Kurath collection by NIPAD (National Initiative to Preserve Americas Dances), funded by the Pew Trust. All attempts to reach High Miller or his family have been unsuccessful. After becoming emeritus from the University of New Mexico he seemed to have disappeared from the knowledge of the staff and faculty that succeeded him (attempt to find him by JWK circa 1996-2000)

3. In 2002 Ellen Kurath donated film of the dance drama "Hurricane" and other choreography clips, and they were professionally copied to videotape format in 2002. They are shelved in proximity to the 8 mm films in the archives.

4. Over seven hundred books, journals, and other publications from the Gertrude Kurath personal library were donated to the CCDR Library by Ellen Kurath. All are listed in-house but not all are online; those that have been incorporated into the CCDR Library collection are cited as contributed from the GPK library and they are in the online data base for the CCDR Library, linked on the CCDR website <www.ccdr.org>.

5. A box of programs and show books collected by Kurath is shelved with the Kurath Archives, but they have not been documented or put into either in house or on line data bases.

6. Citations of Kurath's work has been collected by the hundreds and are stored in boxes on the archiving shelves, but they have not been sorted, or put in the in house or online data bases.

7. Other materials that are on the in-house computer data base at the CCDR facility include folders or files about:

- Woodlands Cultural Center
- employees who worked on the Kurath archives
- article by Kealiinohomoku, unabridged and unedited - includes front matter, descriptive and personal, that was excluded from its publication in the UCLA Journal: Graduate Dance Ethnologists: (1995).
"THE CONVICTION OF GERTRUDE PROKOSCH KURATH ABOUT THE INTERCONNECTIONS OF DANCE AND MUSIC"

-- JOANN W. KEALIINOHOMOKU UCLA DANCE ETHNOLOGY FORUM FEB. 18-20, 1994.

- GPK's personal library inventories - donated to CCDR and shelved with the rest of the CCDR library. The following are listed in the CCDR computer data base:

- A. original inventory by William Malm
- B. corrected and updated inventory (JWK)
- C. explanation and instructions for using inventories

- information and correspondence about grant materials:

- A. NIPAD (National Initiative to Preserve American Dance)
- B. DHC (Dance Heritage Coalition)
- C. Ellen Kurath

- materials about nomination to Michigan to honor GPK posthumously, 2001.

- materials about panel reviewing GPK's challenge for 21st century, for SEM 2001 meetings (see CCDR Newsletter listing in References).

- correspondence about 8 mm sound films.

- correspondence about Andy Garcia, nephew of Antonio (Tony) Garcia.

8. The "deer head" (constructed from pieces of deer skin and glued around a wooden frame surmounted by real deer horns) for a Yaqui deer dancer, and obtained by Gertrude Kurath during her trip to Sonora, Mexico, in 1946, is preserved under a specially made display case placed on a display stand at the Flagstaff facility of CCDR. This "deer head" is very fragile, and has lost its red scarf "flower." Ellen notes that one of its glass eyes was lost and Gertrude replaced it with a glass marble. At present it is protected from the elements in the CCDR Flagstaff facility by being covered (the entire plastic case) with a large scarf. This head is the same one that Gertrude wore for a photo shoot by either her 12 year old daughter, Ellen, or a friend in a neighbor's back yard close to the Kurath 1125 Spring Street address, Ann Arbor, Michigan; Gertrude put on the deer outfit for the purpose of demonstrating the dance (even in 1946, photographs were prohibited). This photo of Gertrude Kurath wearing the deer dancer outfit, including the deer head has been published in several publications including Kurath's 1986 book, the Library of Congress newsletter announcing the award from the Save America's Treasures program, in the year 2000, and is part of a display by NIPAD (National Initiative to Preserve America's Dance). A large copy of this photo of Gertrude as the deer dancer is part of the collections donated to CCDR and it is now famed and hung on the wall of the CCDR facility in Flagstaff, Arizona.
